It 's clear that both automakers knew there was a problem with the dashboards because Lexus sent out a technical service bulletin to its dealers in 2011, the last year to have dashboard issues. The bulletin essentially said that if a customer complained about the 2006-2008 Lexus IS 250 and IS 350 vehicles, there were revised interior panels that could be installed to address the problem.

The "maintenance required" light illuminates on the instrument panel of the Lexus 350 every 3,000 to 5,000 miles. This light is to remind the car owner that it's time to have the Lexus serviced for an oil change and, depending on mileage, any other recommended maintenance service procedures listed in the manual.
